Pre-List Comparable Analysis

A strategic pricing review of your home, grounded in 21 years of valuing the Lowcountry.

— Your Next Pearl Awaits —

"What's my home worth?" is the wrong starting question.

It's the question every seller asks. It's the question every agent gets paid to answer. And it's the question that produces the most expensive mistakes in real estate.

The right question is:

> "What does the recent comparable bracket support — and how do I position my home inside it?"

That's a different conversation. It's the one I want to have with you.

I'm one of the only Realtors in Savannah who is also a Certified Residential Appraiser.

21 years of valuing Lowcountry homes for lenders, courts, and estate purposes. License GACR287636. Independent appraisal practice through Gergacs Appraisals, LLC.

What that means for your listing strategy: I read comparable sales the way an appraiser does. I know which adjustments the market actually supports and which ones sellers wish it did.

Most agents can show you a comparable. Few can read it.

What this service is — and what it isn't.

PRE-LIST COMPARABLE ANALYSIS	USPAP APPRAISAL
A strategic pricing review based on recent local comparable sales	A certified appraisal report under USPAP Standards Rules 1 & 2
For listing-strategy decisions	For lender, estate, divorce, or legal purposes
Provided as part of my Realtor representation	Provided as a separate, paid appraisal engagement through Gergacs Appraisals, LLC
Comparable analysis + market context + listing strategy recommendation	Independent value opinion documented under USPAP scope of work

If you need a USPAP-compliant appraisal report — for a divorce, an estate, a refi, a tax appeal — that's a separate service through my appraisal practice. I'll tell you which one fits your situation.

How I read comparables for your home.

1

Subject property review

Walk-through · GLA · condition · feature inventory · improvements vs original

2

Comparable selection

5-8 recent closed sales · same neighborhood · similar style/size/age · within last 6 months

3

Paired-sales adjustments

Time · GLA · garage · bath · condition · view · lot — adjustments supported by paired-sales data, not by habit

4

Bracket reconciliation

Adjusted comp range · weighted by similarity, recency, proximity · indicated bracket

5

Listing strategy

Where in the bracket your home positions · pricing entry point · expected absorption

6

Pre-list prep recommendations

What's worth doing (high ROI) · what isn't · staging vs as-is · timing

The first 60 seconds in your home.

Before any comparable is pulled, I notice:

- The roof line — original heart-pine vs replacement; period-correct vs aftermarket
- The foundation lines — Savannah humidity, settling patterns, drainage
- The crown molding and trim — original is rare and supports the bracket
- The kitchen "decade signal" — when was it last meaningfully updated
- The primary bath — most undervalued or overvalued room in pricing
- The natural light — angle, exposure, time-of-day affecting your photos
- The yard's intended use — entertaining vs maintenance vs garden

None of these are deal-breakers. All of them inform where your home positions in the comparable bracket.

Things sellers swear add value — that comparables don't actually support.

- Custom paint colors — unless it's neutralized for sale, it's a discount
- Above-ground pools — almost never recouped in coastal Georgia
- Aftermarket sound systems — speakers don't appraise
- Over-improved primary baths — past a point, the comparables stop rewarding it
- Highly personalized landscaping — buyers see maintenance, not beauty
- Unpermitted finished spaces — appraisal won't credit GLA without permits
- Sentimental "we put $80k into the kitchen" — what matters is what comparables show, not what was spent

I'd rather tell you the honest answer than the flattering one.

What you'll have at the end of our 30 minutes.

- The comparable bracket your home falls into based on 5-8 recent local sales
- The specific positioning within that bracket — high, mid, low — and why
- The 3-5 things worth doing before listing (and the 3-5 not worth doing)
- The expected absorption window in your neighborhood at this entry point
- The marketing plan for your home — channels, photography, story angle
- A clear next step — list now, list later, list with prep, or skip the conversation entirely

You walk away with a real picture of your home's market context. Whether that leads to a listing with me or not is a separate question. The first conversation is yours to keep.

Honest narrative

Specific neighborhood detail · what an appraiser sees · what a buyer should know · who this home is for. Not "stunning property!"

Your listing isn't another address on a feed. It's a story we tell about a home that's leaving one chapter and starting the next.

> "I was set on listing at $1.4M. Nikki walked me through the comparable bracket and showed me the recent Skidaway sales. The honest range was $1.25-1.32M. We listed at $1.295M and closed in 22 days at $1.288M. I would have lost three months chasing a number the comparables didn't support."
> — SKIDAWAY ISLAND SELLER, 2025 CLOSING

> "Three other agents pitched us. Each came in with a higher 'price opinion.' Nikki came in with comparable-supported analysis and told us why two of those numbers were unrealistic. We picked her. She was right."
> — ARDSLEY PARK SELLERS, 2024 CLOSING

> Asset note: testimonials shown are representative. Replace with verified past-client quotes from Lane 3 review-collection sweep.

The first 30 minutes is yours.

Whether you list with me, list with someone else, or decide not to list at all — the conversation is the deliverable. You walk away with the comparable bracket, the positioning, and the honest answer.

If we work together after that: it's because the relationship makes sense, not because you got pushed.
